

Specific Concerns: Is in-home care a short-term fix?

It may be, and then again, some people have been receiving in home care for over a decade.

In-home care is designed for people who need focused and predictable assistance with their activities of daily living. If a person has or develops needs that are random and unpredictable, it may be that in-home care serves only as a short-term solution until a long-term solution is selected and arranged.
